● SHORT ON TIME?

PART 1 · AT A GLANCE

The short version

Your treats, your photos, and your reputation are excellent. The website just isn't telling people what you are, where you are, or what to do next, and Google is having the same trouble.

5.0★
Google rating from 2,335 reviews. Your biggest selling point, and it isn't on your website.

8.1s
For the main photo to appear on a phone. Google's target is under 2.5 seconds.

0
Clear buttons in the first screen of the homepage to order or book.

2
Real pages Google can find. Nothing for catering, birthdays, or events searches.

WHAT'S WORKING

- Your photos are colorful and mouthwatering. They sell the product.
- The menu preview on the homepage makes people want to buy.
- Online ordering exists through Shopify, with Shop Pay and every major card.
- The site works on phones. Nothing is broken; it just needs direction.
- Your booking packages are well thought out, with clear tiers and pricing.

WHAT'S HOLDING IT BACK

- No clear headline or buttons at the top; the slideshow does the talking.
- Sections don't lead anywhere. Photos without prices or order buttons.
- Your best information is inside images (menu, packages, About), so Google can't read it and it's hard to read on phones.
- Two services blended together: booking the truck and catering by the dozen.
- Slow on phones and missing the basics Google uses to rank local businesses.

THE GOAL

Every section should have one job, and every visitor should be one tap from ordering treats, booking the truck, booking catering, or finding your storefront.

Every section, one job

Right now the homepage goes from a slideshow straight into store hours. Reordered, it walks visitors from “what is this?” to “I want that” to “here’s how to get it.”

Today

1. Slideshow
   Drinks fade in and out; one small Contact button on one slide.
2. Store hours box
   Useful, but it comes before anything to buy.
3. About (flyer image)
   Text is inside a picture.
4. Menu preview
   Great photos, no prices or buttons.
5. “Make your day sweeter” banner
   Hard-to-read text over a busy photo.
6. “Explore” text
   Two lines of filler.
7. Pretzel rods banner
   A second, separate order button.
8. Footer
   Links and payment icons only.

Recommended

1. Hero: say it, then point
   Headline, location, 5.0★ rating, Order Treats + Book the Truck.
2. Featured treats
   6–8 cards with photo, price, and Add to Cart, then “See full menu.”
3. Services
   Two clear cards: Book the Truck and Catering, each with starting prices.
4. About
   Your story in real text, with a photo of you and the truck.
5. Reviews
   Your 5.0 rating and a few real customer quotes.
6. Visit & Contact
   Hours, map, tap-to-call, and a short message form.
7. Follow along
   Instagram/TikTok strip: where the truck is this week.
8. Footer
   Address, hours, phone, socials, and an email/text sign-up.

PART 1 · YOUR PAGES

A clear place for everything

Today there are four pages, and some do two jobs at once ("Menu | Contact Us") while others mix very different things (treats and merch together). Each service and each task gets its own clear page.

Home

KEEP · REWORK

- The guided flow on the previous page.
- Shows a selection of treats, not everything.

Menu & Shop

COMBINE

- Combines Order Treats & Merch and the Menu into one page.
- Tabs: Drinks · Treats · Candy Apples · Merch.
- Real text with prices; order buttons where you sell online.

Services

NEW

- An overview that clearly separates your two services, so nobody confuses truck bookings with catering orders.

Book the Truck

REBUILD

- Festival Fun, Signature, and Candy World Experience as package cards.
- A booking request form (date, guests, package, location) instead of email.
- Fees, deposit, and event guidelines as a short FAQ.

Catering

NEW PAGE

- Treats sold by the dozen and gallon drinks as cards with prices.
- $175 minimum, pickup or Uber delivery, and an order request form.

Contact

SEPARATE

- Its own page: form, phone (tap to call), email, map, and hours.
- Also a section on the homepage.

ALSO WORTH ADDING

- About page: your story, the LED-lit trailer, and the events you've served.
- FAQ: travel area, deposits, how far ahead to book, allergens and vegan options (your menu says vegan friendly).
- Where's the truck: an upcoming events list, so fans can find you outside the storefront.

PART 2 · HOMEPAGE HERO

The first five seconds

WORKING

- The photos are great. Bright, bold drinks that look like your brand.

HOLDING IT BACK

- No headline says what Candy World is or where it is.
- Slides fade in and out, so the message keeps changing before people read it.
- The only button ("Contact Us") is on one slide and easy to miss.

WHAT WE'D CHANGE

- A clear headline: e.g. "Snellville's candy truck & treat shop."
- Two strong buttons: Order Treats (jumps straight to the treats below) and Book the Truck.
- A trust line: 5.0★ from 2,335 Google reviews · Open Wed–Sun.
- Keep your photos, but let the text and buttons stay put while they change, or use one standout image.

Your hero today (one of five rotating slides)

PART 2 · RIGHT AFTER THE HERO

Lead straight into ordering

HOLDING IT BACK

- The next thing visitors see is store hours, before they've seen anything to buy. It breaks the momentum.
- The info box is small and sits over a photo of a line of customers.
- The phone number isn't tappable, so phone visitors can't call in one tap.

WHAT WE'D CHANGE

- Featured treats come next: 6–8 cards with photo, name, price, and Add to Cart, so the hero's Order button lands right here.
- "See the full menu" leads to the Menu & Shop page with tabs.
- Hours move to a Visit & Contact section near the bottom, with a map and tap-to-call.

Your second section today

PART 2 · ABOUT

Tell your story, not a flyer

WORKING

- Your description is strong: birthdays, student events, corporate events, festivals, and the LED-lit trailer.

HOLDING IT BACK

- It looks like a flyer. The picture has your info baked in; it's tiny on phones and invisible to Google.
- No face behind the brand. People book people.

- A real photo of you with the truck, beside your story in real text.
- Three quick highlights with icons: Storefront · Food truck · Treat shipping.
- A button to Book the Truck, so the story ends with a next step.

Your About section today

PART 2 · MENU PREVIEW

Mouthwatering, but a dead end

WORKING

- This is the best section on the page. It makes people want to buy.

HOLDING IT BACK

- No prices and no buttons. Interest has nowhere to go.
- "Available for catering only" appears with no link to catering.
- Some items have no description (Signature Unicone Snowie).

WHAT WE'D CHANGE

- Turn these into the featured treats cards: price plus Add to Cart or Order for pickup.
- A "Catering" badge on catering-only items, linking to the Catering page.
- One line each on what makes it special, so every card can sell on its own.

PART 2 · LOWER HOMEPAGE & FOOTER

Sections that need a purpose

- “Let us make your day sweeter!” White text over a busy photo is hard to read, and the button is small.
- “Explore Candy World’s Fantastic Treats” is two lines of filler with no action.
- The pretzel rods banner repeats the ordering idea, far from the menu.
- The footer is a generic bright blue, with no address, hours, phone, or sign-up.

WHAT WE’D CHANGE

- Services section: Book the Truck (from $10/person) and Catering ($175 minimum) side by side.
- Reviews section featuring your 5.0★ Google rating.
- Visit & Contact: hours, map, tap-to-call, short form.
- A footer that works: address, hours, phone, socials, email/text sign-up, in your brand colors.

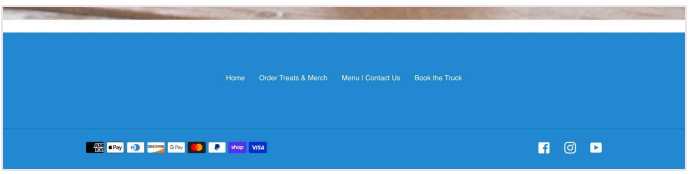

“Make your day sweeter” banner

PART 2 · ON YOUR PHONE

Works well, could sell better

WORKING

- Everything stacks and works on phones. Nothing is broken.

- The first screen is only a drink photo: no headline, no button.
- Slow: about 8 seconds for the main photo on a typical phone connection; several images are 300–700 KB.

WHAT WE'D CHANGE

- Headline and buttons visible on the first screen.
- Tap-to-call and Get directions everywhere they appear.
- Compressed, right-sized photos so pages load in a few seconds.

Candy World Drinks N' Treats

Candy World Drinks N' Treats is your favorite Mobile candy truck! Our unique take on serving sweets and treats infused with creativity and candy is a delight to guests at every event we are honored to be a part of. Candy World is available for bookings at private events including birthday parties, student engagements, corporate events as

One page to browse & order

Order Treats & Merch

- Treats and merch are mixed together (candy apples next to socks and a mug).
- Titled only "Products," and 9 items are split across 2 pages.
- None of your signature drinks can be ordered or pre-ordered.

Menu | Contact Us

- The menu is one image, unreadable on phones and invisible to Google.
- The prices show only "$" with no amounts.
- The intro text points to a "Catering" page that doesn't exist and mixes up which page has packages and which has dozen treats.
- Two jobs on one page: menu and contact form.

WHAT WE'D CHANGE

- One Menu & Shop page with tabs: Drinks · Treats · Candy Apples · Merch.
- Everything in real text with prices, and order buttons on what you sell online.
- Flavors as simple lists (snowies, slushies, lemonade), plus add-ons like Tajin and chamoy.
- Contact moves to its own page.

Two services, two clear paths

WORKING

- Your packages are excellent: clear tiers ($10, $14, $17 per person), minimums, and what's included.
- The map shows your 5.0★ rating and directions.

HOLDING IT BACK

- All of it lives inside images, so Google can't read your prices or services, and phones have to zoom.
- Booking the truck and catering by the dozen are on one page, though they're different services.
- Customers calculate their own price and then email you. Every extra step loses bookings.
- The page heading is "Find Us!", not what the page is about.

WHAT WE'D CHANGE

- Book the Truck page: each package as its own card, an instant price estimate (guests × package + $200 truck fee), and a request form.
- Catering page: dozen treats and gallon drinks as cards with prices, $175 minimum, pickup or delivery, and an order form.
- Event details as a short FAQ: deposit, travel fee, 10-day notice, extra hours.

PART 4 · SEARCH & SPEED

Why Google overlooks you

These are behind-the-scenes settings visitors never see, but Google reads them to decide who shows up for “candy truck near me” or “dessert catering Snellville.”

WHAT WE CHECKED	WHAT WE FOUND	WHAT WE'D DO
Page title in Google	Just “Candy World Drinks N' Treats.” No words people search for.	e.g. “Candy Truck & Treat Shop in Snellville, GA	Candy World.”
Description in Google	Says “Located in Atlanta” and “ice cream shop.” Your storefront is in Snellville.	Accurate location and services, written to earn the click.
Main heading	The homepage's main heading is the logo image; the Book page's is “Find Us!”; the Menu page has none.	One clear text heading per page that says what it's about.
Image descriptions	14 of 16 homepage images (and 8 of 9 shop images) have none.	Short descriptions such as “Rainbow candy slushie with gummy toppings.”
Text Google can read	Your menu, packages, catering prices, and About story are all images.	Rebuild them as real text, which Google can read and phones can display.
Local business details	No structured data telling Google your address, hours, phone, or that you're a food truck/dessert shop.	Add local business markup so you show in Maps and “near me” results.
Pages for what you sell	Only 2 pages, 9 products, and an empty blog in your sitemap.	Pages for Book the Truck, Catering, Birthday Parties, Corporate Events, and service areas.
Phone speed	Main photo appears in 8.1s; full load 14.3s; 3.1 MB and 89 files.	Compress images, remove unused apps, consider a newer Shopify theme.
Theme	Shopify “Debut” (an older theme, last set up around 2021).	A current Shopify theme is faster and easier to update.
Tracking	A Google Ads tag is installed, but no Google Analytics.	Connect Google Analytics and Search Console to see where visitors come from.

PART 4 · BEYOND THE WEBSITE

Questions for our call

For a food truck, most traffic starts on Google Maps and social media, not on the website. These answers show where the real gaps are.

Google Business Profile

Is it claimed and up to date (hours, photos, menu, posts)? Does it link to your website?

Reviews

You have 2,335 at 5.0★. How do you ask for them? Do you reply to them?

Instagram & TikTok

How often do you post? Do you post where the truck will be? Does your link in bio go to the website?

Directories

Are you on Yelp, Roaming Hunger, StreetFoodFinder, and The Knot (weddings, events)?

Consistent details

Is your name, address, and phone identical everywhere? Your site says Atlanta in one place, Snellville in another; your number is a (252) area code.

Google Ads

Your site has a Google Ads tag. Are you running ads now? Where do they send people, and what do they cost each month?

Where sales come from

Roughly what share is storefront, truck bookings, catering, and online orders? Which do you want to grow?

How customers find you

Do you ask new customers how they heard about you? Do you check your Shopify analytics?

Staying in touch

Do you collect emails or phone numbers for specials and new flavors?

Bookings today

How do most bookings come in now (email, DMs, calls)? How many inquiries turn into bookings?

PART 5 · NEXT STEPS

Where we go from here

Quick wins

CAN START RIGHT AWAY

- Fix the page titles, Google descriptions (Snellville, not Atlanta), and headings.
- Add image descriptions to every photo.
- Make the phone number tap-to-call; add hours and address to the footer.
- Compress the large photos for faster phone loading.
- Fix the Menu page text that points to a page that doesn't exist.
- Connect Google Analytics and Search Console.

Full redesign

RECOMMENDED

- A homepage where every section has one job, leading to order or book.
- Menu & Shop with tabs: Drinks, Treats, Candy Apples, Merch.
- Services, Book the Truck (package cards and instant estimate), and Catering pages.
- Your 5.0★ reviews, your story, and a real Contact page.
- Built for phones first, fast, and set up for Google.
- A preview of the new homepage before anything goes live.

Thank you, Jessica.

Your treats and your reputation already do the hard part. With a website that shows people what you offer and makes it easy to order or book, more of the people who love Candy World can find you.
